Who needs vaccines?

Infants and young children are often at higher risk of serious problems if they get a vaccine-preventable disease. Make sure they get all their immunizations on time, every time.

Children in child care and school may be exposed to diseases. It is important for their immunizations to be up-to-date. It's not too late to catch up. If your child missed any immunizations recommended at younger ages, be sure to catch up now.

Teens and young adults should catch up on all missed immunizations to protect themselves and others against disease.

Adults need vaccines too! Adults never outgrow the need for immunizations. The specific vaccines needed are determined by age, lifestyle, risk conditions, locations of travel, and previous vaccines.

Protect your family and your community

Make sure you get all of your recommended immunizations. They keep you healthy and can help stop the spread of disease to your family and community.

People who aren't immunized put themselves and others at risk of getting the diseases that vaccines prevent.

Some diseases, like measles and pertussis, spread very easily. It only takes a small number of unprotected people to cause a disease outbreak.
