DEFINITION OF CLASS

This is professional public health nursing in a generalized public health nursing program. An employee in this class is responsible for providing professional nursing service in the home and/or clinical setting by providing and demonstrating nursing care and health guidance to individuals and families, or for special nursing projects. Assignments are selected to provide experience in the practical application of public health nursing principles and are increased in difficulty when proficiency is acquired. Work is performed with considerable independence and is reviewed through field observations, quality assurance measures, and review of medical records and reports for the effective application of public health nursing principles.

DUTIES & RESPONSIBILITIES

- Maintains public health by providing health services and information.
- Functions as a staff nurse in various clinical settings that treat or prevent communicable diseases such as vaccine preventable diseases, sexually transmitted infections and tuberculosis.
- Visits homes to provide education and encourage families to practice positive health habits in the areas of physical, mental, and emotional health and recognize early disease symptoms.
- Makes necessary referrals to appropriate health or human service-agencies.
- Participates in epidemiological studies, surveys, and special projects.
- Conducts individual and group conferences for the instruction of disease prevention and health maintenance.
- Assesses and facilitates nursing needs of individuals and families for the development of care plans.
- Coordinates care with other local health agencies and communicates effectively with peers and local health professionals, providing education/information as needed/requested.
- Maintains confidential client records in appropriate format and prepares reports of findings and recommendations.

- Performs related work as required.

The above statements reflect the general details considered necessary to describe the principal functions of the job and shall not be considered as a detailed description of all the work requirements that may be inherent in the job.
